REFLECTIONS

Principal's Message

The ability to make good decisions is a skill that you have been developing most of your life. As a child you had to judge the depth of a puddle of water before you stepped in with your new rubber boots. Your judgement was often poor and you went home with wet feet. Since that time you have had to make many decisions some of them much more important than the depth of a puddle of water.

Good judgement does not automatically improve with age. It is a skill developed as any other skill, through use and experience. Each time you are called upon to make a decision, many factors must be considered. Have you been in this situation before? How skilled are you? What advice can be sought from others? What will be the results of your decision?

Of all of these factors, past experiences should be relied upon most heavily providing you are prepared to benefit from past errors. You should not get your feet wet a second time if you walk into the same puddle twice.

I would like to congratulate our editor, Karen Dunscombe, Mrs. Michaels and the Year Book Committee for another very excellent year book.

Vice-Principal's Message

In this book of memories I would like to leave a few thoughts and statements that express what I hope has guided me as well as students.

What is learning?

A journey, not a destination.

What is discovery?

Questioning the answers, not answering the questions.

What is the process?

Discovering the ideas, not covering content.

What is a school?

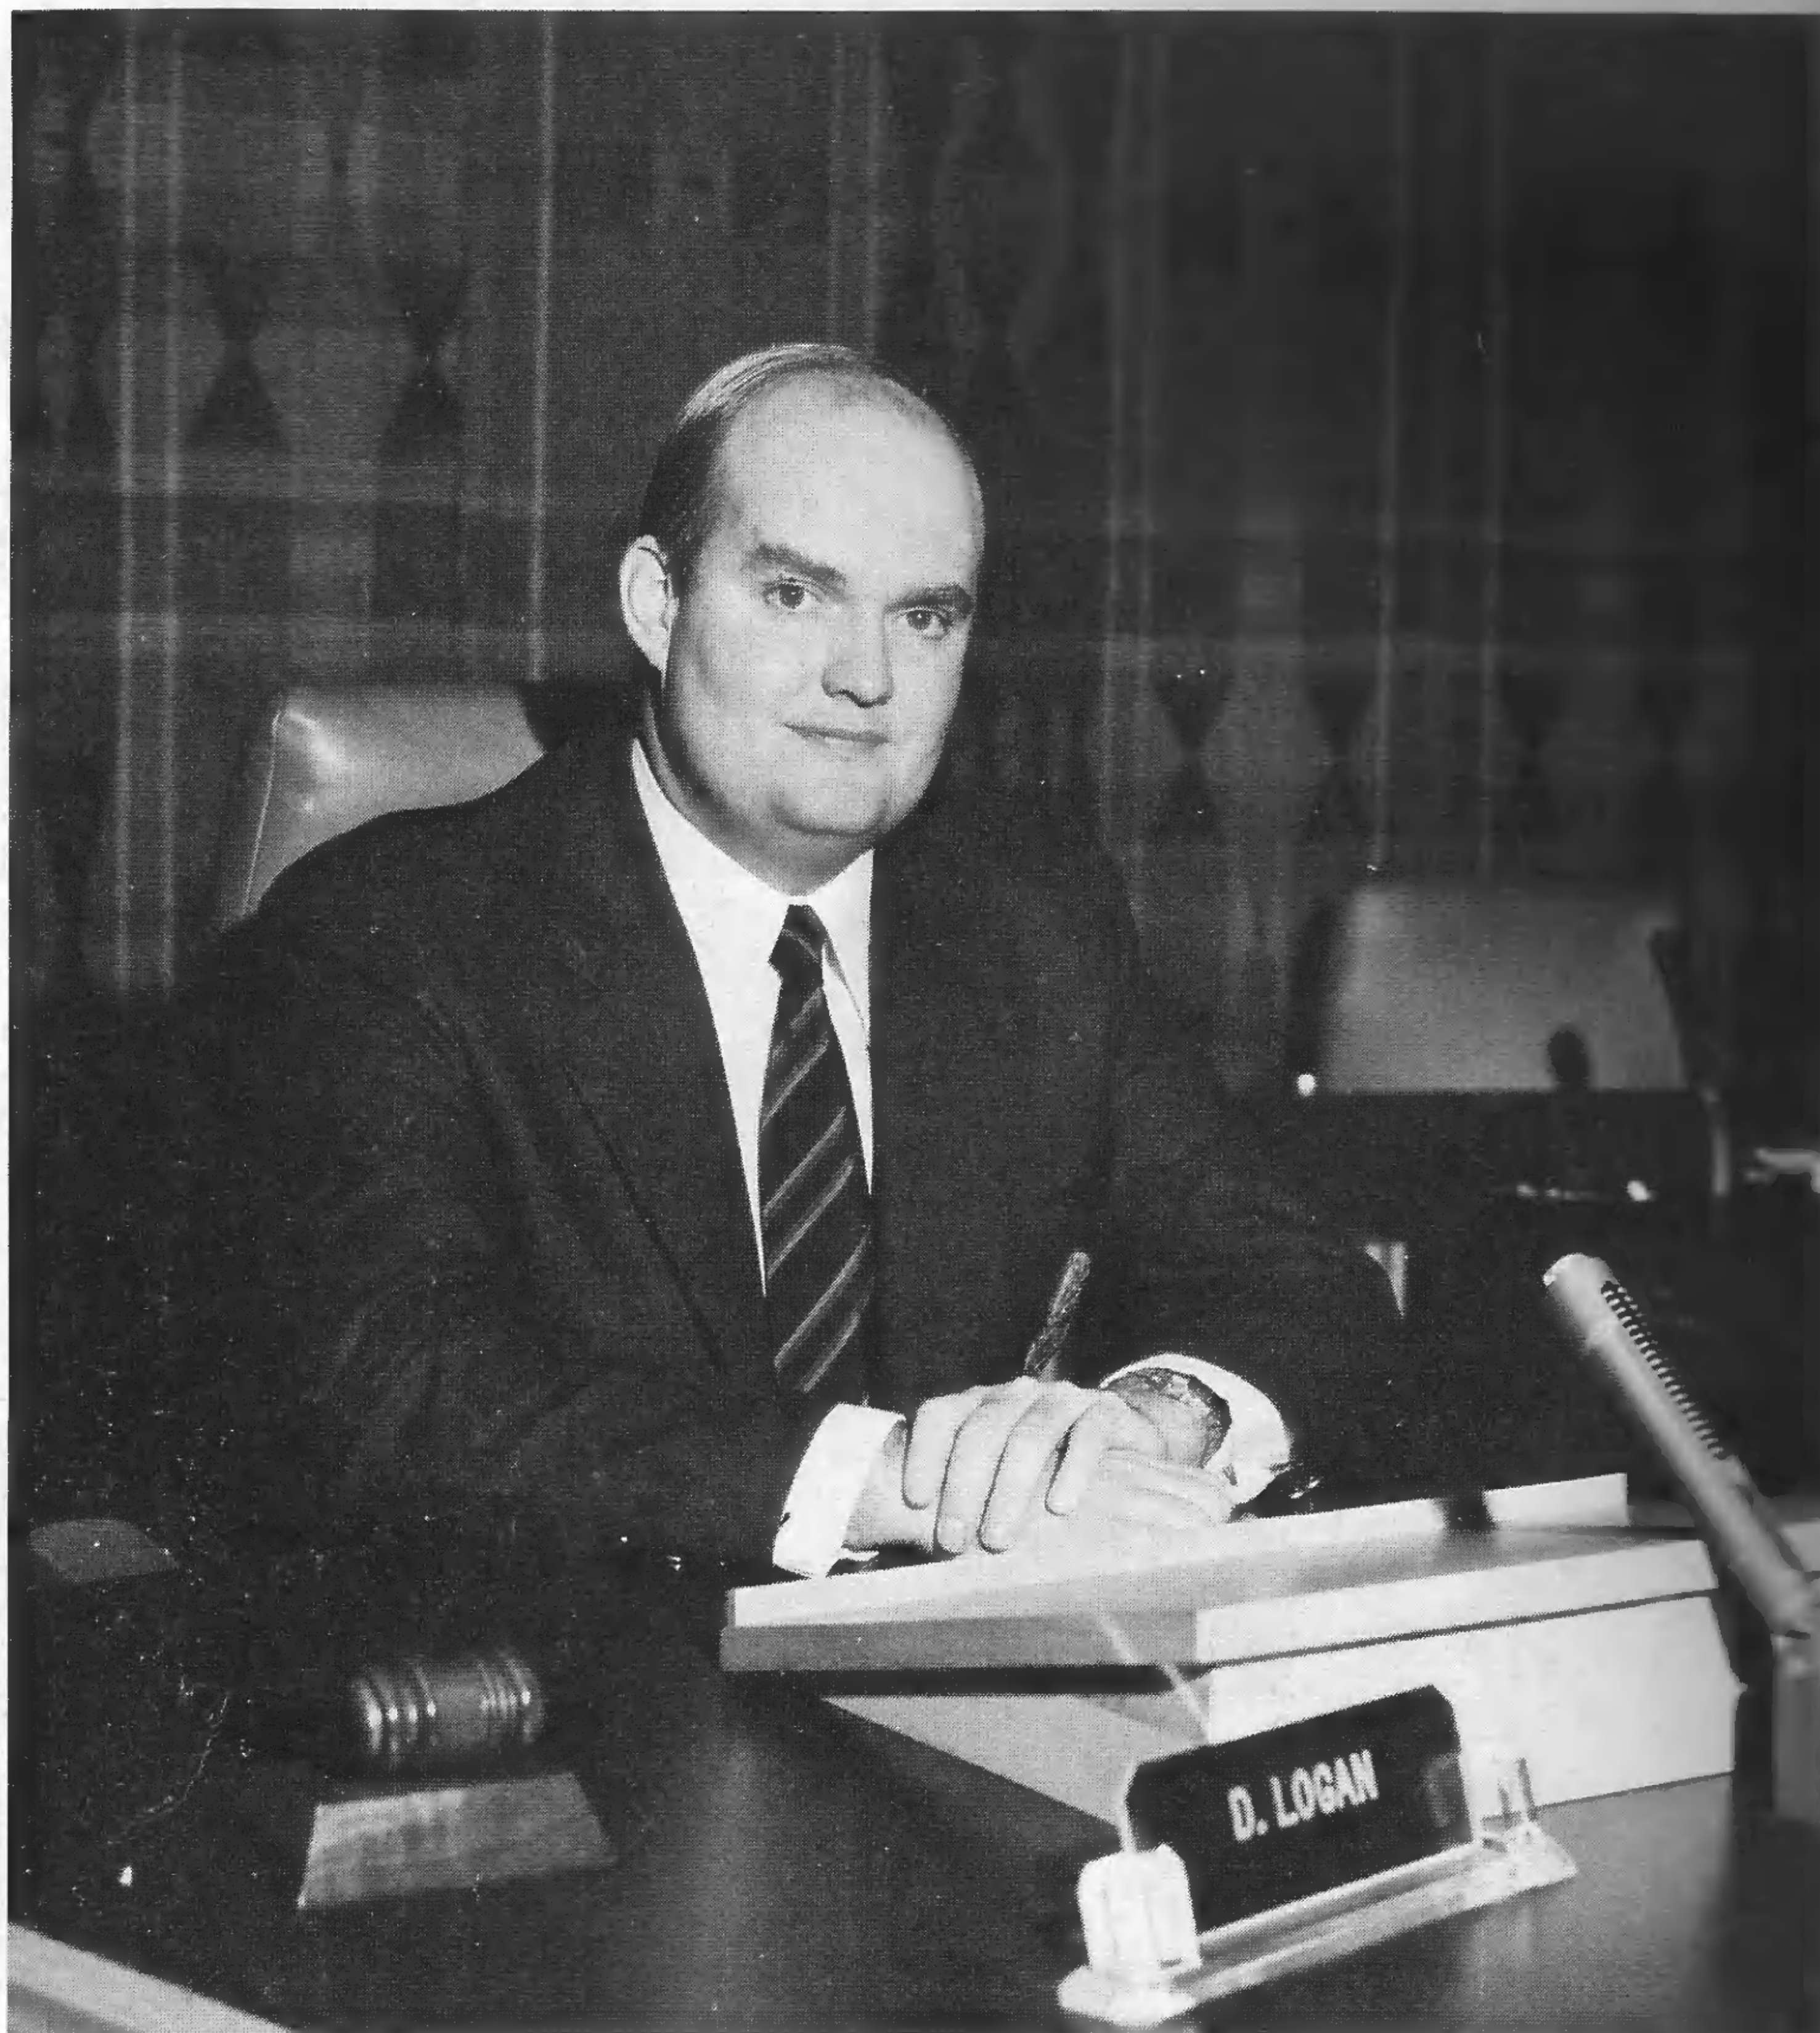

Whatever we choose to make it.

Mr. Leclerc

We travel together . . .

Dear Students:

It is a genuine pleasure for me to congratulate both the graduating class and all the students who contributed to this yearbook. It is tempting at times like these to wax philosophical and talk about "passing the torch" to the younger generation but you are too sophisticated for this and I am sure prefer the truth.

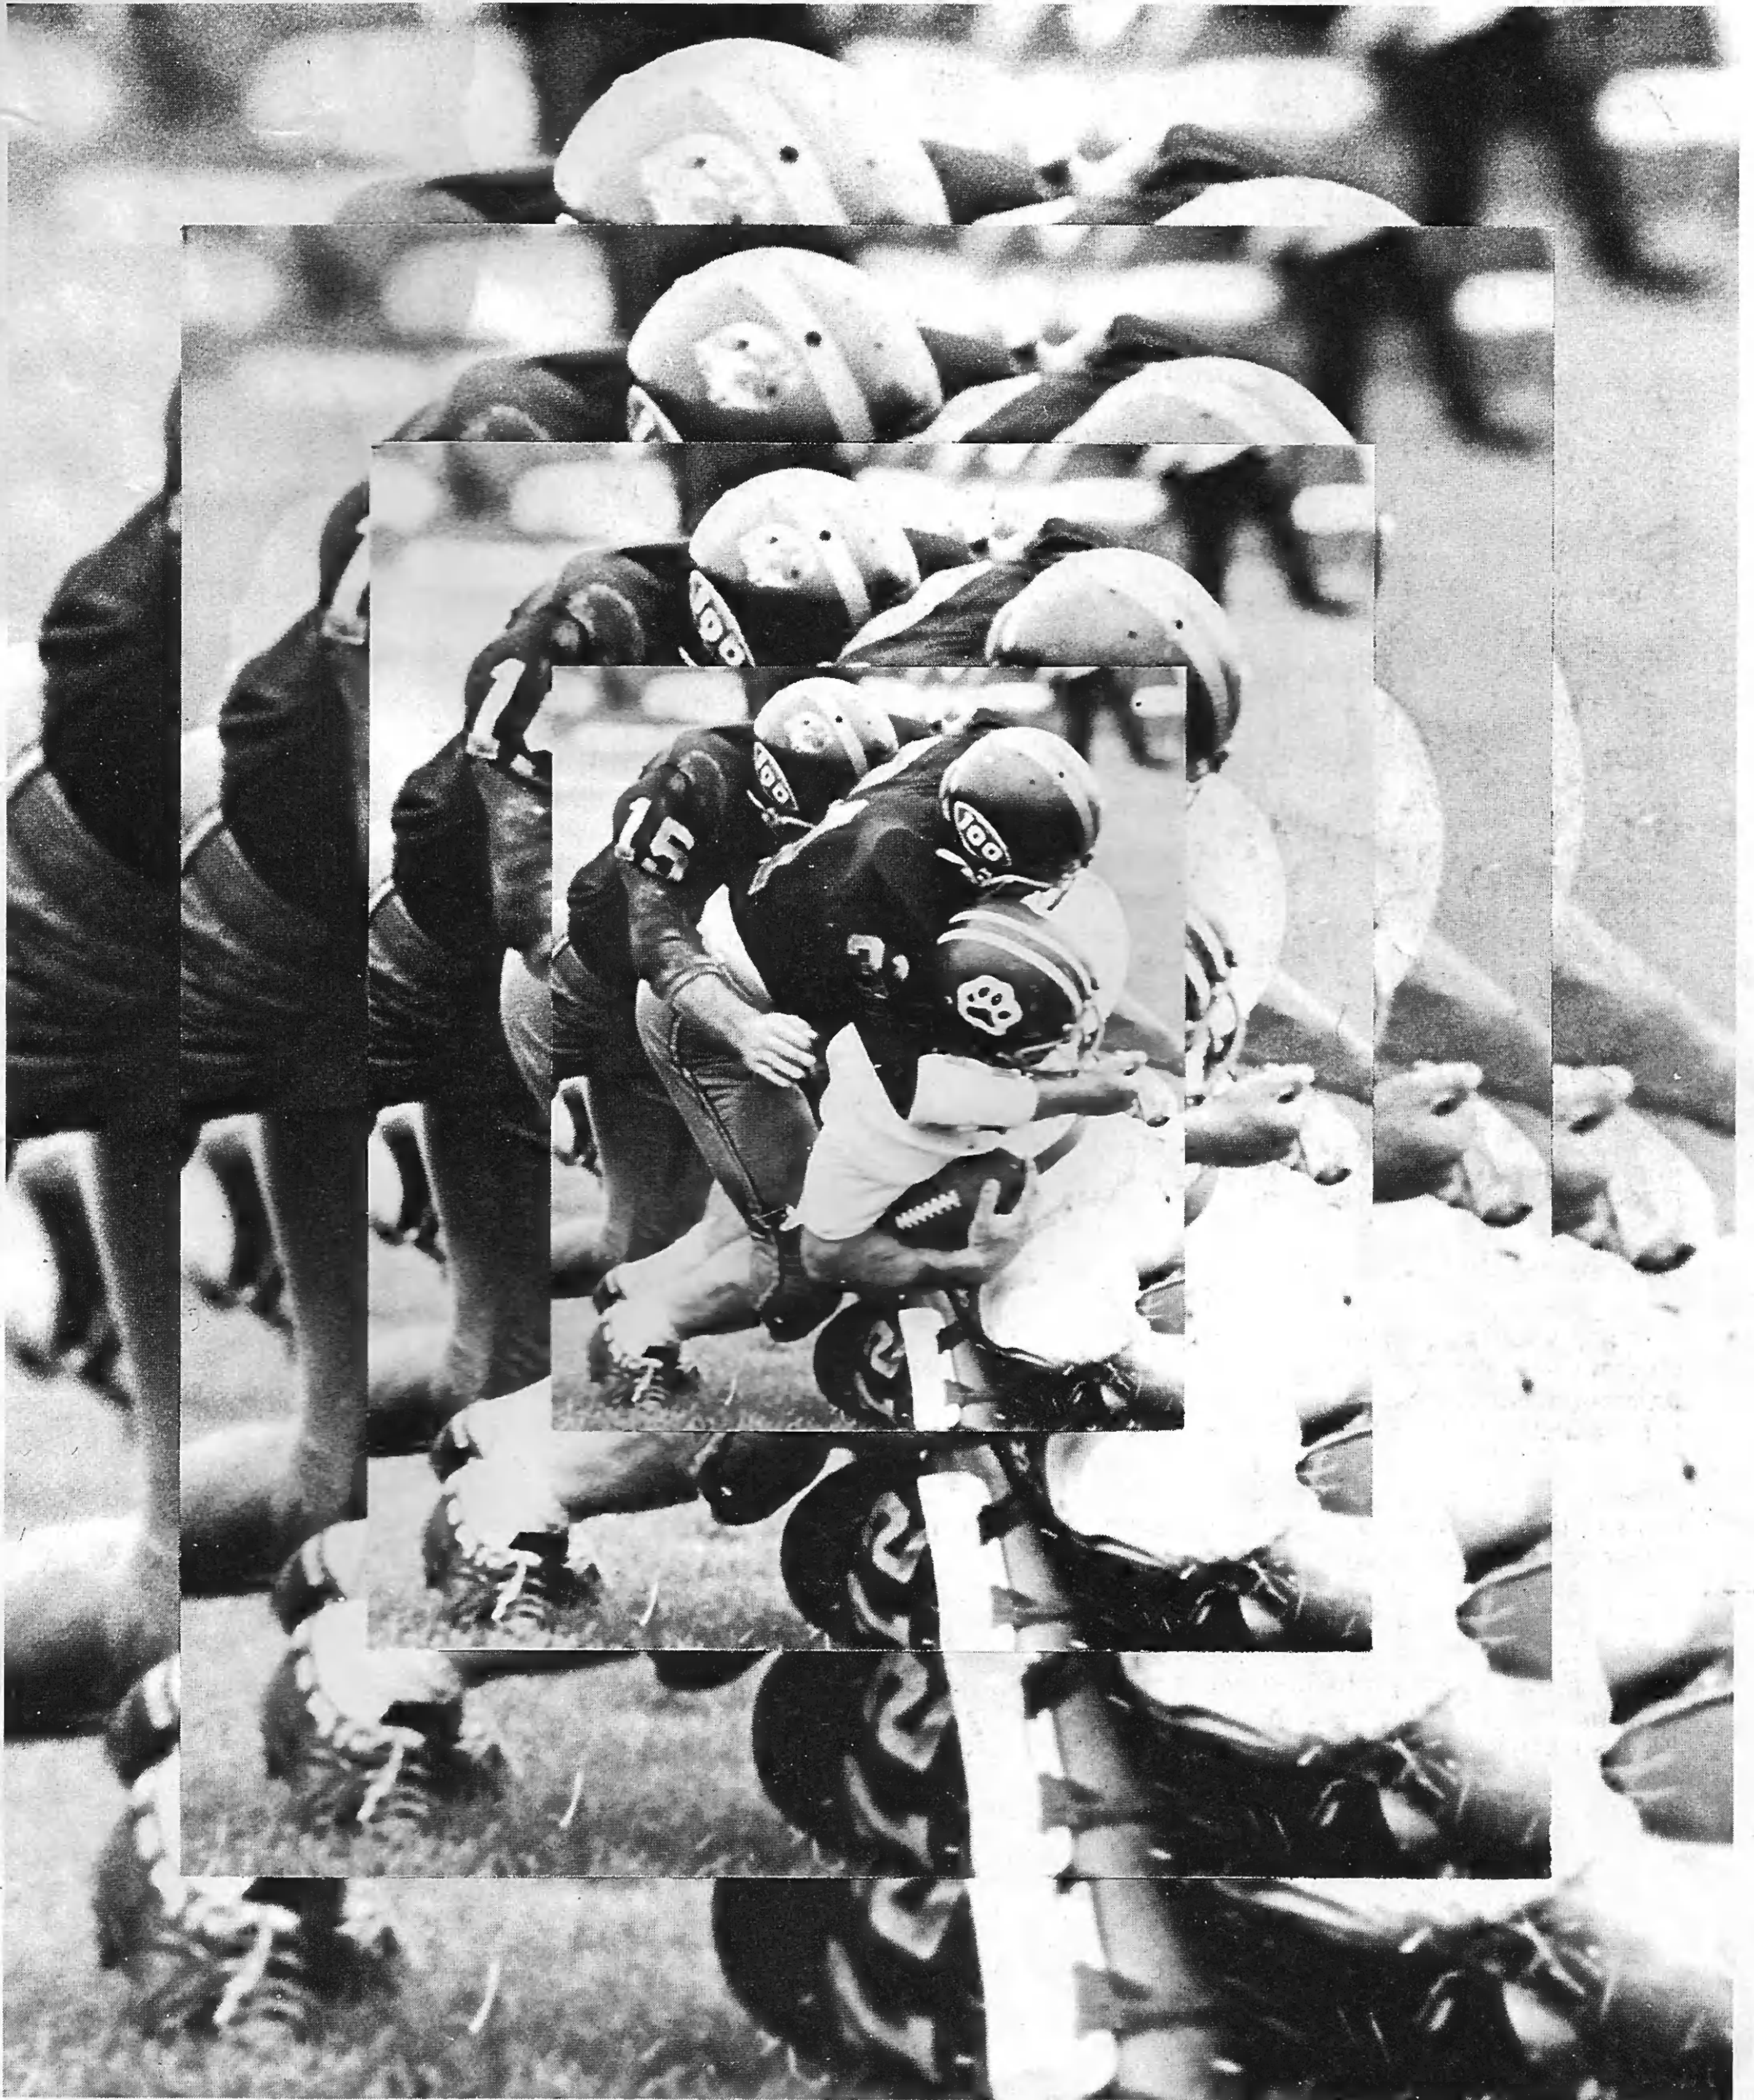

Recently the pace of life and the magnitude of our problems have accelerated well beyond the experience of my generation and those which preceded it. We as Canadians can no longer speak of our magnificent future without a critical awareness of the actual world in which we live and a consideration of the needs and hopes of others. These problems and changes have produced a world in which wise and compassionate leadership was never more necessary. I wish you all a happy and rewarding future and in the difficult but promising years which lie ahead I hope you will all be able to look back and reflect that we in your school system have served both you and the Future well in preparing you for your time to lead.

Congratulations and Good Luck in all your endeavours.

DAVID M. LOGAN

Sandy Lake Diary

by Ingrid Arenberg

We left the school Monday February the 10th at 7:00 a.m. We reached Dryden at 11:50 a.m., but we gained an hour on the way. We were flying on a Boeing 737 jet. At Dryden, we switched to a 25 seater bush plane. We reached Sandy Lake at about 2:30. The community greeted us with a big sign saying "Welcome Oakdale to Sandy Lake". We lived in a 1 floor town house but we slept in the school.

Thursday morning we went on a sensitivity trip. We walked to and down the airstrip and about a mile into the forest. We were left alone one by one along the trail. I was the 2nd. last one, so I was really far into the forest. We had instructions on paper for what to do. To get from the path to the log I had to sit on, I had to plow through snow right up to my waist. The snow wasn't wet or packed. It was dry, light and fluffy, so it was easy to walk through. It was too cold for the snow to melt. None of the snow was touched except for my path and birds' tracks in the distance. The only sounds were me and the wind in the trees. I sat down on the log and sank about 3 feet into the snow. It was 40 below with the wind on the airstrip but there because of the tree's it was only about 20 below and warm. The sun was shining through the trees and there wasn't a cloud in the sky. The sun made it seem warm.

The first thing I was told to do was listen and write what you hear. I sat there without moving and far off I could hear the sound of a skidoo. That's the time I really enjoyed being far away from everything. Everything seemed so peaceful that it's something you never want to leave. Knowing that you are in the middle of nowhere but somewhere. We were told there is vitamin C in pine needles and they said to taste them. They taste just like they smell. I left a piny taste in my mouth. We tasted the snow too. It was very light and it melted on my tongue like candy floss. After that and a few other things to do I walked back to the campfire and cooked hotdogs on sticks.

That afternoon the regular things were cancelled. A man in the community had died the Friday before we came in a plane crash. Since everyone was either related or good friends, practically everyone went to the funeral. We had to go as well because the people really wanted us to go. Thursday afternoon we walked into the church. The place was semi noisy but the sounds were from babies and small children. None of the older children or parents or grandparents said a word. Everyone had a sad look on their face. We were told that a person who dies in mourning until they are buried. After they are buried they are forgotten until a year from that day. Then there is a big feast in remembrance. Then the person is totally forgotten.

The church filled up and the ceremony started and still throughout the whole thing the rustling and crying of babies never stopped. Mike (the vice principal) said it was always like this. It seemed the natural way of things there. There was about 400 people in the church. After the ceremony everyone including us shook hands with the dead man's close relatives. Then we stood outside the church for about a half hour. Out there the Indian children were laughing and talking as usual. Then we followed a procession of people down to the graveyard. It was custom for every person to throw earth on the grave. Some of the Oakdale people did this but most of us didn't. On the grave they put the dead man's possessions. No one ever touches these things. That was the end of the funeral. After the funeral, we spent the evening at home.

Friday morning we went ice fishing. That afternoon we had free time. Friday night we went to a pot luck dinner at the school. Saturday morning the carnival was cancelled so 12 kids went shooting while the 10 taped a conversation on how to improve the trip for the grade 8's next year. Saturday afternoon we packed and made our lunches for the next day. Saturday night we went to a dance at the school. They had no records but they had a group and they had all the equipment needed. They had make their library into a coffee shop with candles and red checked tablecloths.

Sunday we finished packing and the plane came at 11:40. We were taken by ski doo to the airstrip and we took off at about 12:00. Everyone felt sad when we started moving to take off. It was sad to think that we probably would never see this place again. Outside as we left were Steve and Mike and some Indian people. No one wanted to leave. The week went too fast. The only thing that kept me from being really upset was the thought of getting home, but I never thought of that till we had been flying for about ten minutes. There was so much empty space below us with no one on it. With so many people and houses and stores at Sandy Lake, it didn't seem like you were so far away from everything. From Sandy Lake to Dryden I didn't see 1 house or settlement or any sign of human life and that was about 300 miles. We landed at Dryden at about 2:00. We took off at 2:30 and reached Toronto at 6:45. We reached the school at about 7:30.

While the Indian students are at Oakdale in May the Foods Programme students are planning on entertaining them to lunch in the Foods Room. To help raise funds for the meal, which will be for approximately 50 people, we held a Christmas Crafts Sale in December. Following two months of making and sewing we opened our Boutique on Christmas Music Night. These pictures show some of our wares and the sales girls.
